Takeaway#3

Unexpected Trends in Hotel Class Performance

LUXURY CLASS SHOWS THE HIGHEST MEAN ADR AND REVPAR ACROSS ALL CITIES

- Concert tourism is increasingly premiumized.
- Luxury hotels often host VIP packages, afterparties, or artist entourages

OCCUPANCY RATES ACROSS ALL HOTEL CLASSES ARE QUITE SIMILAR

- Concert-goers span across income levels.
- Limited supply in lower-tier hotels

Single-Artist vs. Multi-Day Festival

06

Single-Artist Concerts

(e.g., Taylor Swift, Ed Sheeran)

- Higher baseline even before the event — pre-event bookings start early.
- Performance grows steadily and smoothly, sustaining across all three phases.
- Demand is more spread out and stabilized, indicating longer stays and flexible arrival

Multi-Day Festivals

(e.g., Lollapalooza, EDC Las Vegas)

- Demand and hotel performance spike sharply during the event.
- Short-lived economic impact — limited pre-event buildup and quick drop afterward.
- Peaks are intense but narrow — resembling a “flash flood” in RevPAR, ADR, and Demand.

Hoteliers

- Offer Artist-Themed Packages
 - Pre-party or after-party
 - Themed meals/cocktails
 - Bracelet workshop
 - Shuttle bus
 - Special discount

Policymakers

- Encourage concerts during off-peak times (excluding summer)
- Improve Transportation Infrastructure
- Use hotel data to plan tourism strategy

Event Planners

- Forecast economic impact to support city bids and sponsorships
- Partner with hotel brands for room blocks and co-marketing deals

Findings

Luxury class shows the highest mean ADR and RevPAR across all cities

Single-artist concerts cause intense but narrow spikes in performance metrics

Hotels should offer experiences beyond rooms — including F&B and engagement activities.

CoStar Validation

Virgin Hotels New Orleans (a premium/luxury property) saw ADR increase by 173% and occupancy by 47% during Taylor Swift's shows.

People were just so excited to do it that they were willing to pay.

Reverb Hotel reported a 500% increase in F&B revenue during Swift's concert weekend.
